80TH WAS ONE OF ORIGINAL 12 AMERICAN ARMY DIVISIONS

Was Organized at Camp Lee August 27, 1917, With General Adelbert Cronkhite in Command—Derivation of Blue Ridge Division and Resume of Activities.

General Adelbert's Eightieth Division was organized at Camp Lee, August 27, 1917, as one of the original twelve divisions of the American Army. It derived its name, the Blue Ridge Division, from the fact that it was made up exclusively of men from Virginia, West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania. General William H. Waldron was made chief of staff.

The division was organized at Camp Lee, August 27, 1917, as one of the original twelve divisions of the American Army. It derived its name, the Blue Ridge Division, from the fact that it was made up exclusively of men from Virginia, West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania.

While the primary training of the division was in the field, it was also engaged in serious battles and was assigned to the holding of independent positions at the front. The division "went over" and two infantry regiments were ordered to take part in a large operation.

The division suffered nearly 400 casualties during August, which is an indication of its active participation at that early date. Movement to the American front was made on August 10, and the division went through the Argonne sector through Amiens and Paris to the fourteenth day of the battle.

Following this began the concentration of the American First Army and the Eightieth Division was moved to the vicinity of Inoeourt, where it fell under the command of the American Third Army and on September 10, 1918, was assigned to the Meuse Argonne Offensive.

Other medals in the collection are the Distinguished Service Medal and the Croix de Guerre. General Cronkhite also carries a division citation from the French government on his personal service badge.

Rev. Edward N. Calisch, who was to have participated in the memorial service at City Auditorium this afternoon, was called out of the city last night, and will be unable to attend.

Such as the bonus adjustment might prove to be. Scores Country's Submission. He scored the submission in manner in which the country received the action of the railway wage board in granting increases will cost many times the amount that the bonus bill will total, while there is sound on all sides of the benefits of the fighting men for seeking a financial adjustment that will help them to meet the burdens of the war profiteers have been helped by the bonus bill.

Wicker electrified the convention when he leaped into Biblical history and brought up Julius Caesar, whom he characterized as the "rider of the treasury" in connection with the stinging rebuke he laid down on bankers, lawyers, business men who used one hand to wave you good-by with their flag, while they were at the same time reaching for their own financial aggrandizement.

Wicker's presentation of his submission was something of a surprise, and it was expected that the national committee would be called upon to take up the matter of the bonus bill rather than the matter of the bonus bill.

At the close of the conference, Major R. A. Brown, the personal representative of Governor Sproul, of Pennsylvania, made some interesting suggestions and informed the committee of best methods he had found in securing data both from military organizations and from the general public.
